

Finding food is one of the last things that Trabzon University students will worry about. There are many places to go for eating and socializing. A great part of the students meets their catering needs in the dining hall where lunch and dinner are served with reasonable prices. The meals here, composed of soup, main dish and a desert or fruit, are subsidized by the university. One day lunch in the dining hall is 3 Turkish liras (0,51 €). In addition, canteens and cafeterias on the campus offer a variety of choices of food ranging from snacks to fast food to cooked meals to suit students' desires. These canteens and cafeterias are located within the faculty buildings and are leased out by the university. They are closely monitored by the university administration with respect to the quality of food served, cleanness, hygiene, and pricing. The university has the right to impose fines on them should they not obey the rules and regulations agreed upon at the time of leasing.

The dormitory on the campus also have facilities selling different types of food for students staying in that dormitory and those coming from outside.

In walking distance from the campus there are also many restaurants and cafes, open till very late in the evening, where one can choose from a selection of many types of food. These places outside the campus also operate on calls and bring in food ordered by the students through phone-calls.
